Metamorphosis of Surfaces

Every growth undergoes change in the process. Let's imagine a butterfly's metamorphosis. From a caterpillar turning into a cocoon then becoming a butterfly, every transformation phase shapes it into a more sophisticated creature. Not only does it become physically more beautiful, but it also holds impactful role in the environment.

Like a butterfly becoming an important part of life, Carta also experiences a similar journey. As we become a more mature brand, we have grown from a simple collection to a more sophisticated one. We continuously aim to create value in our surfaces, touching spaces with beauty and creativity. With the confidence in #UnlimitedInspiration, we join hand with designers in our ecosystem to bring meaning into interior design world.

This new addition to our collection is an important milestone in Carta's transformation. It is a story about our belief: surfaces evolve—in color, in structure, and in pattern.

This is our evolution.

A close-up photograph of several feathers. The upper portion of the image features teal-colored feathers with a fine, ribbed texture, covered in numerous small, glistening water droplets. The lower portion shows magenta-colored feathers, also with a ribbed texture and water droplets. The text "EVOLVE IN COLOR" is centered in the middle of the image, overlapping the transition between the two colors.
